Answer: “Beneath all uniforms" the poet is referring to the military uniforms that soldiers wear, which represent different countries. These uniforms symbolize the divisions between people based on nationality or conflict. However, the poet suggests that beneath these outward appearances, all people share the same fundamental humanity.

(ii) How does the poet suggest that all people on earth are the same?

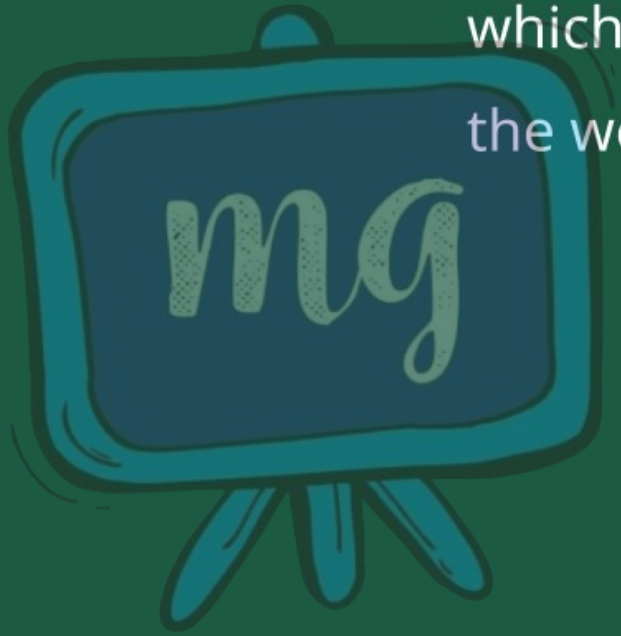
Answer: The poet suggests that all people on earth are the same by emphasizing their shared experiences, emotions, and vulnerabilities. Despite their differences in nationality, race, religion, or social status, people ultimately face the same joys, sorrows, fears, and hopes.

Q.2 In stanza 1, find five ways in which we all are alike. Pick out the words.



Answer: Here are five ways in which we all are alike, as mentioned in stanza 1:

1) "A single body breathes" (we all have the same body and breathe in the same way).
2) "The same land" (we all live on the same Earth).
3) "Waking, sleeping" (we all share the same routines like waking and sleeping).
4) "Fed by peaceful harvests" (we all eat and benefit from the same earth's resources).
5) "Starved by war" (we all suffer the same way during conflicts).

Answer: The poet suggests that we are told to hate our brothers when there is conflict, war, or political unrest.

Those who promote hatred might include political leaders, religious figures, or media personalities who seek to manipulate public opinion for their own agendas. The poet advises that we should not follow such instructions, as they go against our shared humanity. He emphasizes that we must remember that we are all the same and not let hatred divide us.
