Conflict with Mr. Keesing

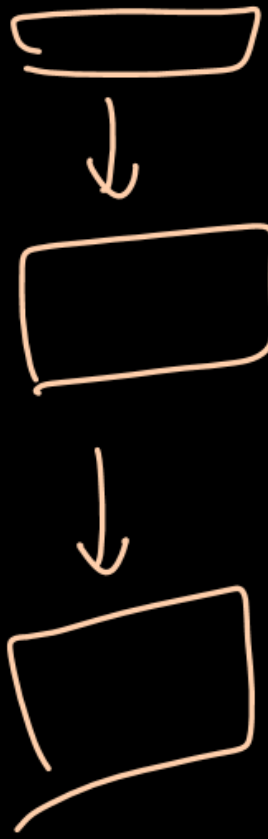

- Her math teacher, Mr. Keesing, is annoyed because she talks too much in class.
- He gives her extra homework: writing an essay titled ‘A Chatterbox’.

FROM THE DIARY OF ANNE FRANK

The First & Second Essays

- Essay 1 : She argues talking is a student trait and an inherited habit from her chatty mother.
- Essay 2 : After talking through the next lesson, she writes on ‘An Incorrigible Chatterbox’ and stays quiet for two whole lessons.

FROM THE DIARY OF ANNE FRANK

The Final Poem & Resolution

- For talking a third time, Mr. Keesing tells her to write on 'Quack, Quack, Quack, Said Mistress Chatterbox'.
- * Her friend Sanne helps her write a funny poem in verse about a father swan biting baby ducklings to death for quacking too much.

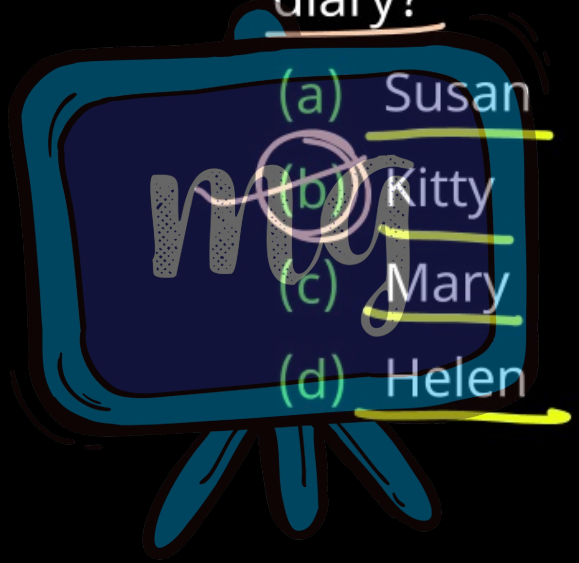

FROM THE DIARY OF ANNE FRANK

- Mr. Keesing takes it as a good joke, reads it to the classes, and finally allows her to talk freely without any more extra homework.
