14. True
15. Horace Danby was suffering from hay fever. He had allergy to some flowers. When he entered the drawing room of Shotover Grange, he felt some sensation in his nose. There were some flowers in the drawing room. He started sneezing and alerted the lady in red dress. Being clever and shrewd, she fooled Horace into believing that she was the owner of the house and got him to take out jewels from the safe.
16. Horace had seen the housekeeper hang the key in the hook outside the kitchen door. He came out from behind the garden wall. He put on his gloves, took the key and opened the door of the kitchen and entered Shot over Grange.
17. The young lady in red who appeared before Horace was cleverer and smarter than he. She told him that she was the mistress of the house, and she had forgotten the lock numbers. She was so confident and persuasive that Horace believed her. Consequently, he left his fingerprints on the safe while opening it and thus got arrested.

18. The lady in red proved to be smarter and cleverer than Horace Danby by deceiving him and getting her work done easily and efficiently. She introduced herself as the lady of the house so persuasively that Horace believed her. Her confidence and mannerisms were very good.

19. Horace Danby was a fifty year old bachelor. He was a good and respectable citizen. He normally remained hale and hearty except for the attacks of hay fever which he usually had in summers. But there was another aspect of his personality. He was not completely honest. His only passion was for rare and expensive books as he loved them. He used to rob a safe every year in order to satisfy his passion. He would plan the robbery carefully each year and then would steal enough to last for twelve months. He was a very good planner as he delved into the minute details. His passion led him to buy the books secretly through an agent and thus satisfy himself.

20. Horace Danby managed his thefts very carefully. He was a meticulous planner. But he was outwitted by a lady in red when he was trying to rob a safe at Shot over Grange. The lady posed as the wife of the owner of the house. Actually, she was also a thief. She told Danby that she had promised her husband to take the jewels to their bank.

But she had forgotten the numbers to open the safe. She wanted to wear the jewels to a party. Horace, as per his research, thought that the owner of the house was a lady of sixty. But he was so moved by the appearance of the lady in red that he believed her and got befooled. He took off his gloves and opened the safe. He left his fingerprints on the safe. The lady deceived him and took the jewels. Thus, Horace Danby was an expert thief, but the lady in red outwitted him.

21. Horace Danby was a good and respectable citizen. He was about fifty years old but he was unmarried. He was a locksmith. He was very successful in his business. He had two assistants in his work. He was usually very well and healthy except for attacks of hay fever. But he was not completely honest. He had a passion for rare and expensive books. So he used to commit theft once a year to satisfy his passion he had not enough money to buy those books. He chose to rob the Shotover Grange as it's safe had jewels worth about fifteen thousand pounds. He thought that it would be sufficient for him to buy good books and lead a carefree life. He used to steal only once in a year as he never stole more than he needed. An act of theft is a crime. A crime is a crime no matter if it is committed a hundred times or just once.
