Mr. Keesing took the message in the right way and impressed by Anne's creativity, his attitude towards her changed..
16. Anne loved her grandma very much. Her grandma died in January 1942. Since Anne and her sister, Margot was sent to Aachen to stay with their grandmother, Anne was attached to her. Anne still loved her and missed her. On her grandma's birthday in 1942 Anne lit a candle in her memory.
17. Anne Frank feels that writing a diary is a strange experience for someone like her. The first reason is that it is her first time that she is writing a diary as she has never written anything before. The second reason is that no one will be interested in reading the thoughts of a thirteen-year-old schoolgirl.

18. According to Anne Frank, people are not always interested in listening to what one is telling them. They get bored and lose patience, but it is not so with paper. One can go on writing whatever one likes, and as long as one likes. Anne feels that she can confide in her diary as she cannot share her feelings with her friends. So, according to her, the paper has more patience than people.

19. Mr. Keesing gave Anne essays to write to keep her talkative nature in check. When Mr. Keesing gave her an essay to write on the topic "Quack, Quack, Quack, said Mistress Chatterbox" as a punishment, she decided to write something real this time. It was about a mother duck and a father swan with three baby ducklings who were bitten to death by the father because they quacked too much. Mr Keesing took the joke the right way. Thus, he stopped punishing her.

20. Peter van Daan was the teenage son of the van Daans whose real name was Peter van Pels. Peter was a quiet timid and honest boy who was sweet. He liked reading books especially if they were meant for adult reading. Once he hid in the loft to read one such book and got so engrossed in reading that he forgot to come down for dinner. His father came up to call him and hit him hard when he found him reading the book.

He was refused dinner that night which he resented. He didn't like his parents' authoritative nature but being shy he never told them about it. He got emotionally alienated from them. At a later stage, he expressed his desire to become a criminal. Anne disapproved of it. She realized that he wanted to be successful but did not want to work hard for it. He was forced to take part in the 'death march' and died on 5th May 1945.

21. This statement shows her inner feelings of loneliness. In fact, she has about thirty people around her, yet she needs a true friend with whom she can share her ideas. She admits that she has no real friend in life. But it doesn't mean that she is all alone in her life. She has loving parents and a sixteen-year old sister. She has a family, loving aunts and a good home. All she thinks about when she is with friends is having a good time, but she only talks about ordinary everyday things. She doesn't seem to get any closer to her friends, and that's the problem. This is why she chooses her diary as her friend. To enhance the image of this longawaited friend in Anne's imagination, she calls the diary 'Kitty'. She writes about her experiences at school in the diary
