15. The third essay was her last essay. The topic was "Quack, Quack, Quack, Said Mistress Chatterbox." She wrote a poem about a mother duck and a father swan. They had three ducklings. Their father had bitten them to death as they quacked very much. Anne's teacher, Mr. Keesing understood what Anne had wanted to say. He understood the joke and then stopped punishing Anne.
16. She made everyone laugh with her answers.
17. Anne Frank thinks of having a diary because she has no real friends with whom she can share her feelings and views. She cannot talk to her friends about her inner feelings, but can only talk about ordinary things. She wants to confide in someone, so she writes a diary to share her feelings. She feels that paper has more patience than people.
18. The classmates of Anne Frank were shaking with fear and nervousness because it was time to move to the next class. It was the forthcoming meeting in which the teachers decided who would move up to the next form and who would be kept back.

19. Anne was a very talkative girl. Mr. Keesing, her maths teacher, didn't like this habit of hers. He punished her by giving her an essay to write on the topic 'A Chatter Box.' She wrote in her essay, "Talking is a student's trait and I would do my best to control it, but I won't be able to cure this habit since my mother is also talkative. So moving away from the inherited trait cannot be done". On reading her arguments, Mr. Keesing had a good laugh. In other words, she had justified her over-talkative nature.
20. Anne Frank was born on 12th June 1929 in a Jewish family. At the time Nazi's had occupied power in German. So, the family had to move away to Amsterdam for safety. Since her childhood, she felt herself alone because of some intimate friend. She had a nice family, but she remained depressed and bored for want of a close friend. She went on thinking. Then she realised that paper has more patience than people. She tried to find a real friend. She wanted to chronicle her feelings and make sense of the world around her. Of course, Anne was living in a pressure cooker. Hiding from Nazis with so many people in a small annexe was not easy. Ann used her diary as a therapy to cope with not only teenaged angst but to keep perspective and her sanity in such a closed environment. So, Anne decided to write a diary. It was her intimate friend in the shape of a diary.
21. Mr. Keesing is unpredictable. In the beginning, he is very strict and punishes Anne for being talkative by asking her to write essays on topics that are difficult and unusual. But after the third essay, his attitude towards Anne changes and he becomes very lenient. Mr. Keesing understands her joke and he never punishes her after that and allows her to talk in the class.
