COMPREHENSION

Directions for the 21 (twenty one) items which follow:

In this section you have six short passages. After each passage, you will find some questions based on the passage. First, read a passage and answer the questions based on it. You are required to select your answers based on the contents of the passage and opinion of the author only.

Passage 1

To avoid the various foolish opinions to which mankind is prone, no superhuman brain is required. A few simple rules will keep you, not from all errors, but from silly errors.

If the matter is one that can be settled by observation, make the observation yourself. Aristotle could have avoided the mistake of thinking that women have fewer teeth than men, by the simple device of asking Mrs. Aristotle to keep her mouth open while he counted. Thinking that you know, when in fact you do not, is a bad mistake to which we are all prone. I believe myself that hedgehogs eat black beetles, because I have been told that they do; but if I were writing a book on the habits of hedgehogs, I should not commit myself until I had seen one enjoying this diet. Aristotle, however, was less cautious. Ancient and medieval writers knew all about unicorns and salamanders; not one of them thought it necessary to avoid dogmatic statements about them because he had never seen one of them.

91. The writer believes that

- (a) most people could avoid making foolish mistakes if they were clever
- (b) through observation we could avoid making many mistakes
- (c) Aristotle made many mistakes because he was not observant
- (d) All errors are caused by our own error in thinking

- 92. With reference to the passage, which one of the following is the correct statement?
 - (a) Aristotle was able to avoid the mistake of thinking that women have fewer teeth than men
 - (b) Aristotle thought women have fewer teeth than men
 - (c) Aristotle proved that women have fewer teeth by counting his wife's teeth
 - (d) Aristotle may have thought that women have fewer teeth because he never had a wife
- 93. The writer says that if he was writing a book on hedgehogs
 - (a) he would maintain that they eat black beetles because he had been told so
 - (b) he would first observe their eating habits
 - (c) he would think it unnecessary to verify that they are black beetles

- (d) he would make the statement that they ate black beetles and later verify it
- 94. The writer is of the opinion that
 - (a) unicorns and salamanders were observed by ancient and medieval writers but were unknown to modern writers
 - (b) ancient and medieval writers wrote authoritatively about unicorns and salamanders though they had never seen them
 - (c) unicorns and salamanders do not exist
 - (d) only those who had observed the habits of unicorns and salamanders wrote about them
- 95. A 'dogmatic statement' in the context means a statement which is

Passage 4

We are tempted to assume that technological progress is real progress and that material success is the criterion of civilization. If the Eastern people become fascinated by machines and techniques and use them, as Western nations do, to build huge industrial organizations and large military establishments, they will get involved in power politics and drift into the danger of death. Scientific and technological civilization brings great opportunities and great rewards but also great risks and temptations. Science and technology are neither good nor bad. They are not to be tabooed but tamed and assigned their proper place. They become dangerous only if they become idols.

It is not luck but labour that makes men. Luck, says an American writer, is ever waiting for something to turn up; labour with keen eyes and strong will always turns up something. Luck lies in bed and wishes the postman would bring him news of a legacy; labour turns out at six and with busy pen and ringing hammer lays the foundation of competence. Luck whines, labour watches. Luck relies on chance; labour on character. Luck slips downwards to self-indulgence; labour strides upwards and aspires to independence. The conviction, therefore, is extending that diligence is the mother of good luck; in other words, that a man's success in life will be proportionate to his efforts, to his industry, to his attention to small things.

 - (a) Luck waits without exertion but labour exerts without waiting
 - (b) Luck waits and complains without working while labour achieves success although it complains

The avowed purpose of the exact sciences is to establish complete intellectual control over experience in terms of precise rules which can be formally set out and empirically tested. Could that ideal be fully achieved, all truth and all error could henceforth be ascribed to an exact theory of the universe, while we who accept this theory would be relieved of any occasion for exercising our personal judgement. We should only have to follow the rules faithfully. Classical mechanics approaches this ideal so closely that it is often thought to have achieved it. But this leaves out of account the element of personal judgement involved in applying the formulae of mechanics to the facts of experience.
